THE CONFERENCE THEME

"PROJECT MANAGEMENT AT THE SPEED OF LIGHT"

The pace of enterprise project management is approaching light speed. The rollout of the National Broadband Network is continuing the trend towards instant meetings, messaging and communication. These trends are creating expectations for instant decision making and direction. PMOz 2011 will focus on ways to adapt proven management processes and inventing new ways of managing in an interconnected world to both meet the pressures of light speed and take advantages of the opportunities.

Some of the opportunities and challenges that will be addressed within the overall framework of PMOz include:

- The potential for seamless integration between project, program and portfolio decision making brings new opportunities and challenges requiring a paradigm shift in the way organisations deliver change.
- Balancing the traditional needs for rigour and analysis with the desire for lightness and agility.
- Integration and information exchange at light speed, both at the enterprise level and across project teams is becoming common place. Within this virtual space, new ways will be required to ensure scope, cost and time objectives are achieved.
- Soft skills at light speed, the interpersonal and intergenerational skills needed to work effectively in cyberspace with distributed and virtual teams. Even in the most traditional of industries, emails, PDF documents and video conferencing are replacing face-to-face meetings discussing paper documents. Everyone is on a journey towards a virtual destination and we all need to update our capabilities.
- New paradigms for success are emerging based on stakeholder and customer satisfaction, linked to the delivery of value to the organisation. In a connected world news and opinions travel at light speed and can significantly affect both projects and organisations.
- The 2011 PMOz program will explore ways project, program and portfolio managers can use the speed of light to achieve excellence in the many interconnected dimensions needed to deliver successful outcomes.

CONFERENCE AIMS

The Conference aims to provide an educational forum featuring proven management processes and up to date cutting edge technology in order to overcome the pressure of 'speed of light' industry changes while providing a vibrant environment for social networking opportunities. It will:

- Provide cutting-edge presentations addressing PM business environment
- Provide a vibrant environment for individuals to learn
- Support the recognition of excellence
- Provide a forum for education and knowledge transfer
- Provide skill development across industries and sectors. with the project
- Program appeals to project and/or enterprise management community
- Promote networking for business opportunities
- Promote the continuous improvement of industry standards
- Promote continuous improvement and professionalism within the project management and enterprise management communities

DESTINATION AND VENUE

SYDNEY

The gateway to Australia, Sydney is renowned as a dynamic and cosmopolitan city, combining excellent business and education facilities with great leisure. Australia's oldest and largest city is set on one of the world's most stunning harbours, fringed by easy-to-reach, sandy beaches.

PAUL D. NIELSEN
Director and CEO, Software Engineering Institute

Presentation: TBC

Dr. Paul D. Nielsen is Director and Chief Executive Officer of the Software Engineering Institute (SEI), a Federally Funded Research and Development Center operated by Carnegie Mellon University. The SEI advances software engineering principles and practices through focused research and development, which is transitioned to the broad software engineering community.

The SEI serves as a global leader in process improvement and networked systems survivability. Additionally, the SEI is a key innovator in software architecture, software product lines, interoperability, the integration of software intensive systems, and the increasing overlap of software and systems engineering. The SEI also provides direct support to more than 50 U.S. government agencies in their efforts to efficiently and effectively acquire new software and systems.

Since joining the SEI in August 2004, Nielsen has overseen the development and expansion of the CMMI product suite, its partner network, and CERT—SEI's network/cyber security efforts—and the growth of the SEI to an organization employing more than 600 employees with operating revenues of $120 million annually. In addition, he has overseen an increase in research activities related to software architecture, complex systems, and cybersecurity to address both present and future challenges. In all areas, he has expanded interactions with key stakeholders, customers and the global software engineering community.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

PAUL BURGESS
Founder, CEO and Creator of the I.D. System®

Presentation: Being an Effective Leader

CEO and Founder of Link-up International, Link-up Consulting and I.D.™ Central, Paul Burgess began a quest more than 20 years ago to understand what makes people tick, why they do the things they do and what needs to happen for people to operate at their best. At that time, his drive to create the I.D. System® was born and his intense, passionate life journey began.

Paul has explored and studied every theory and profiling tool on the market for decades, and continues to find that they generally measure behavior – not drive or motivation. He created the I.D. System® to fill that void. In 1991, after extensive research, Paul discovered the four Instinctive Drives that make up the I.D.™

Two decades later, the I.D. System® remains unchanged, but the range of situations, experiences and practical applications for the system continue to grow and develop. Over 30,000 people have taken their I.D. ™ and experienced its impact, and that number grows every day.

DAVID TUFFLEY
Lecturer, Senior Consultant, Griffith University

Presentation: Leadership through Self-Actualization

Dr David Tuffley is a part-time Consultant with the Systems & Software Quality Institute (SSQI). He is also a Lecturer in the School of ICT, at Griffith University since 1999.

David has a strong track record in applied research, principally in the leadership development field. He has presented successful project leadership workshops to industry since 2008. David also specialises in software process improvement and ethical IT practice.

Before academia, David consulted in the computer industry for 17 years beginning in London in the 1980's. David has undertaken extensive action research into the communication problems experienced by software developers and users.

LYNN CRAWFORD
